Changes in the City Center are Many

The changes taking place in the center of the city are many and many motorists are having difficulty adapting to these changes. However, if all motorists follow the traffic signs they should have no trouble, according to traffic expert Richard Kramers.

During the past week we noticed two major changes: one directly behind the shopping center and the other behind the Royal Plaza Mall in the Havenstraat. Regarding the Royal Plaza, the street trenches originally built to allow only the big busses to drive through have been removed. In addition to the removal of these trenches DOW has also created a double lane behind the Royal Plaza for motorists. This means that vehicles can no longer park on the left side of the road as was the case up to most recent.

The other change which was a bit more difficult for motorists to assimilate is the one above the Paris Restaurant in the Wilhelminastraat. Here, the traffic entering the Wilhelminastraat can not make a right turn when they reach the Paris Restaurant. The traffic can continue straight ahead or make a left turn. The traffic that normally would enter behind the OM building and go up and reach the former Interbank can now make a right turn and exit at the crossing at Paris Restaurant. Here traffic can turn right and continue onto the Wilhelminastraat or pass the intersection and head towards the Willem III Tower.

Traffic expert, Kramers informed us that they did some research of these changes on a Saturday before implementing them, and found that the problems encountered were minimal. He admitted that at certain places they might have to do some reconstruction to ensure that vehicles do not hit the pavement or the curbs. During the first three days police were monitoring the changes and the flow of traffic and that there was just one minor accident. It has been noted that there is traffic congestion at peak hours in the morning when everyone is heading to work and taking children to school, at noon when children are being picked up at school and again in the afternoon at the end of the work day. This, according to Kramers, is an international phenomena experienced everywhere.

No change we make will totally eliminate that situation he believes. During the hours between those high peak hours the traffic moves smoothly and without any problem whatsoever. The changes, according to Kramers are in conjunction with the government's total renovation scheme for the city which will eventually close off a section of the main street. The amplification of the city center will also entail the closing off of the area adjacent to City Hall and the Census Building. Our motorists can now begin to become accustomed to the changes in preparation for the total project when this is completed.

One of the problems we are still faced with is that of parking. In the vicinity of the Bus Station there is a large parking area, albeit a hefty distance from the city center. The government is studying the possibility for creating 3 other parking areas around the city center.

Tiara Air and ImSan sign service agreement for Air Ambulance

Tiara Air and ImSan (Medical Institute of San Nicolas) recently signed an agreement for the provision of an Air Ambulance service. Tiara Air will soon start with the Air Ambulance operations between Aruba and various locations with a Lear jet-LR35A, which will be based in Aruba.

ImSan will provide Tiara Air with highly trained medical personnel to insure proper care and supervision during the flights. ImSan will also supply the Air Ambulance with state-of-the-art medical equipment, instruments and emergency medications.

Both parties are pleased with this agreement and the opportunity to provide the community of Aruba with a fully equipped and professional operating Air Ambulance.

India to press ahead on nuclear power

India's commerce minister Anand Sharma

WASHINGTON (AFP) — India's commerce minister has called for more cooperation with the United States on nuclear energy and brushed aside talk of scrapping ambitious plans in the wake of Japan's Fukushima crisis.

On a visit to Washington, Commerce Minister Anand Sharma said he has faced questions on whether India should rethink its nuclear energy policy and responded flatly: "My answer was no." While supporting safety reviews of nuclear establishments, Sharma said: "We are very clear it is an absolute must in the bouquet of energy resources which have to be accessed."

India's fast-growing economy is heavily dependent on highly pollutant coal and imports of crude oil. Less than three percent of India's electricity comes from nuclear power but it hopes to raise the figure to 25 percent by 2050.

India, shut out of global nuclear markets for decades due to concerns over its weapons program, in 2008 signed a landmark agreement championed by US president George W. Bush that opened up nuclear trade.

France, Russia and private US and Japanese firms have since been locked in fierce competition to sell new reactors to India.

Since the crisis in Japan, environmentalists and residents have campaigned to stop construction due to start in 2013 at Jaitpur on India's west coast in Maharashtra state which would be one of the world's biggest nuclear facilities.

The US-India nuclear deal become a symbol of growing friendship between the world's two largest democracies, whose relations were often uneasy during the Cold War.

President Barack Obama has supported warming ties with India and on a visit last year threw his support behind New Delhi's aspirations to a permanent seat on the UN Security Council. But his administration has often fended off charges in India that it has not put the same priority on relations as Bush had.

Obama's chief of staff William Daley appealed for India to liberalize its market further but said he was pleased with the direction of the two nations' economic relationship -- including rising Indian investment in the United States.

Hezbollah members confess to spying for CIA: Nasrallah

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AFP) — Hezbollah chief Hassan Nasrallah on Friday announced that members of his militant movement had confessed to being CIA agents and accused arch-foe Israel of turning to the US spy agency when it failed to infiltrate his Iran-backed party.

In the first such acknowledgment of infiltration since the group's founding in the 1980's, Nasrallah refused to disclose the identities of the two party members but said a third case was under investigation, slamming the US embassy in Lebanon as a "den of spies."

Nasrallah also said the group was investigating whether the third member of the party had been recruited by the CIA, Israel's Mossad or the intelligence service of a European country.

The Shiite leader, whose party is blacklisted as a terrorist group by the U.S., insisted however that the alleged agents had not been involved in the 2008 assassination of top Hezbollah operative Imad Mughnieh in Damascus.

US says won't rule out options on Venezuela sanctions

WASHINGTON, (AFP) — The United States is monitoring Venezuela's ties to Iran and "no option" is off the table as far as potential sanctions against President Hugo Chavez's government in Caracas, a US official warned Friday. "The department strongly urged Venezuela to pursue a path of cooperation and responsibility rather than further isolation and we will continue to do so," Kevin Whitaker, the acting deputy assistant secretary for Western Hemisphere affairs, told a congressional hearing, adding that Washington was monitoring Venezuela for "patterns of support for acts of international terrorism."

The United States on May 24 slapped sanctions on Venezuela's state oil giant and cash cow PDVSA for its commercial relations with Iran, which it deems in violation of international sanctions on Tehran over its nuclear program.

The State Department's coordinator for counterterrorism, Daniel Benjamin, also attended Friday's hearing, convened by House Republicans to discuss potential new sanctions on Caracas, and said Venezuela has shown a "demonstrable failure" to meet international requirements, particularly in counternarcotics operations. "Instead of meeting its international obligations," Venezuela "has chosen to have close relations with Iran and Syria," Benjamin said.

Venezuelan Foreign Minister Nicolas Maduro last month said he would need to evaluate the real effect of the US measure against PDVSA before determining what might be an appropriate reprisal.

The US measure was taken "as part of its unilateral sanctions policy against the Islamic Republic of Iran. The government voices its utmost rejection of this decision which was a hostile action, and outside international legal norms," Maduro said.

Iranian officials have staunchly denied Western suspicions that Tehran's nuclear enrichment program is masking a drive for atomic weapons.

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AFP) — The Kimberley Process against "blood diamonds" will allow Zimbabwe to sell some diamonds from its controversial Marange fields, in a decision that left the watchdog sharply divided on Friday. Right groups walked out of the Kimberley meeting in Kinshasa, where African countries, China and India supported the decision that was opposed by Western nations, rights groups and industry. Western companies fear the bad press that comes with "blood diamonds", gems whose sale is used to finance armed conflicts.

Successful Town Hall Meeting in San Nicolas

SAN NICOLAS -- Wednesday evening another successful Town Hall Meeting was held, this time in San Nicolaas at the YMCA Building. Reportedly tions and listen to the concerns of the citizens of San Nicolaas.

Minister Otmar Oduber reported that there were many questions from citizens with for the area. He shared that there are several projects already to be started with funding in place. Very soon they will be opening a Tourism Office in San Nicolaas. Projects that were stuck in the bureaucratic system have been processed and have financing to move forward. Oduber is convinced that the citizens of San Nicolaas can now see the different projects that are projected for the area. He is also aware that they must put the accent on several areas; such as on the labor market where there is quite some concern regarding the labor laws.

All in all the Ministers agree that this was another very successful meeting where citizens had an opportunity to meet with their representatives and express their concerns, opinions and get answers to their questions.

some 400 persons were in attendance at this meeting. Ministers Eman, Visser, Oduber and de Meza were on hand to share information, take quesrespect to the labor situation. They were also very interested in learning more about the development of San Nicolaas, the projects in the planning phase

June 26 is International Day against Drug Abuse & Criminality

This year the Fundacion Anti Droga Aruba (FADA) in charge with the prevention of drug abuse has a new slogan for this year's Anti-Droga international campaign. The slogan, chosen by the United Nations is ... "Drugs are controlling you? Your life, your community. There is no room for drugs." This slogan has been used since 2007 and will concentrate on the different aspects of the control of drugs worldwide: drug abuse, cultivation and production of drugs and illicit drug trafficking.

FADA is also intent on making our community aware of the problem of illicit drugs and how they affect our community at all levels. No person, family or community is safe where there is the abuse of drugs and the trafficking of illicit drugs. Drugs control the mind and body of the individual using them, and it also brings criminality with it. This makes it a problem for everyone in the community.

The goal of the worldwide campaign is to make every citizen aware of the problem and to get everyone to contribute to a safer community, free of illegal drugs. FADA wants everyone to reflect on this day, on those suffering from drug addiction either directly or indirectly. On this day we will also remember those who died as a result of drug addiction. A special religious service will be held tomorrow in the Catholic Church in Brasil at 9:00 in the morning by Pastor Jairo Maduro commemorating this day.

Drug addiction has grown on Aruba and internationally, bringing much grief to many families. The FADA campaigns are all designed to stimulate everyone to lead a healthy life away from illegal drugs and promoting healthy activities at school, on the job and in our social lives.

For more information feel free to contact FADA at 588-2999 or stop by their offices at Campanastraal 5, Oranjestad

These include town bands, the restoration of historic buildings and ships, dance performances, the preservation of unique cityscapes and landscapes, and scholarships for young artists and scholars to study abroad.

The organization has its own representative on Aruba.

Those receiving the award this year were: Gravin Isabelle zu Ortenburg, for her unstinting maintenance and preservation of the Middachten Palace, renovating it and making it accessible to the public. Joe Sickmann, a retiree who works voluntarily to preserve culture and history and last but not least, Han Nefkens, who since the year 2000 had dedicated his time to advancing art appreciation loaning his personal collection to museums.

The award event took place at the "Palais de Dam" in Amsterdam in the presence of Her Majesty Queen Beatrix. Aruba Minister of Culture Michelle Hooyboer-Winklaar, who is in Holland for meetings related to cultural and economic opportunities for the island, was honored to be share in this tribute to outstanding members of the community, and to personally meet Queen Beatrix.

Additionally representing Aruba were Aruba Minister Plenipotentiary Edwin Abath and President of the "Prins Bernhard Cultuurfonds" on Aruba, Alice van Romondt.

Reef Care Aruba 2011 to take place July 2 & 3 for the 18th consecutive year

Rudy Davelaar, Castro Perez, Gwendeline Maduro and John Oster

The first reef and shore cleaning event organized on Aruba in 1994, the Aruba Reef Care Project, unveiled the 2011 logo and announced this year's clean-up dates during a press conference at TGI Friday's on Thursday afternoon, June 23.

Castro Perez of the Aruba Tourism Authority was one of the original organizers of the event with Marine Biologist Dr. Byron Boekhoudt. Castro's annual efforts have resulted in scores of volunteers taking to the waters with diving and snorkeling gear to clear refuse from reefs and piers, while hundreds comb our beaches to again leave behind a pristine environment.

Joining Castro in making this year's event a success are Rudy Davelaar of the Aruba Marine Park Foundation, Gwendeline Maduro, intern with the ATA and Project Manager, and John Oster, Managing Director of S.E. Aruba Fly 'n Dive, a veteran supporter of the clean up. A number of other dive operators are accepting registration from divers who wish to participate in the clean up.

Reef Care Aruba 2011 encourages businesses, schools and other institutions to form groups to join in the clean up efforts. Each participant will receive a certificate of appreciation, a 2011 collectors item Reef Care tee shirt, light lunch daily, and "most importantly of all, the satisfaction of being part of an effort to help the marine environment."

On Sunday, July 3, when the last garbage bag is hauled away, there is a traditional celebration at the Reef Care Headquarters at Naptali Henriquez Park across from the Talk of the Town Resort. All volunteers can enjoy some refreshments and music from popular local groups and the famous raffle for participants featuring excellent prizes such as weekend stays at resorts, dinners for two, and activities from major tour operators is conducted.

Those wishing to participate in this year's Reef Care

Project can contact Castro at the ATA, or Ryan Koolman, Jasmine Maduro or Amayra Boekhoudt; telephone number 582-3777. Registration can be done via e-mail at arubareefcare@gmail.com

New large crab species discovered in Costa Rica

SAN JOSE (AFP) - A new species of large land crab was discovered on Cocos Island in Costa Rica, a local newspaper reported on Monday.

University researchers from Costa Rica and the United States discovered the new species, named "John-garthia cocoensis," on the Pacific Ocean island. The distinguishing characteristic of J. cocoensis, according to the researchers, is its large size--a male can measure 40 cm (15.7 inches) with their front legs extended (females measure smaller).

The crabs live in holes dug into the soil and eat primarily grasses and seeds.

Robert Perger and Rita Vargas from the University of Costa Rica and Adam Wall from the Los Angeles County

Natural History Museum are credited with discovering the new species.

Perger told the local newspaper that J. cocoensis resembles the J. malpilensis crab, which lives on nearby islands.

"The similarity with other species in the western Pacific indicates that larvae (which develop in the sea) may have crossed to Cocos Island by sea currents," and then adapted to the habitat to grow into a new species he said.

Cocos Island is located off the coast of Colombia but within the territorial waters of Costa Rica and is the only island in the Western Pacific that has a humid tropical forest climate and a wide variety of animal species.

Into bats? There's an app for that

LONDON (AFP) - Scientists have created a "batphone" by designing a smartphone app to help people capture the ultrasonic calls of bats in their area, the Zoological Society of London has revealed.

The iBats app for iPhones and Android phones aims to make it easier to monitor local bat species, by replacing three pieces of recording kit with just a phone and an ultrasonic microphone.

Researchers say it will help a network of more than 700 volunteer bat-trackers around the world who are part of a monitoring programme called iBats, in their efforts to record bat calls in the UK, Eastern Europe, Ukraine, Russia and Japan.

The app can record the calls of more than 900 species of bat which use echolocation to find food and to navigate.

China brings forward key high-speed rail launch

BEIJING (AFP) - China has announced it will bring forward by a day the launch of a much-anticipated high-speed train link between Beijing and Shanghai to June 30.

The link, which has been operating on a trial basis since mid-May, "has passed safety assessment and currently is fully qualified for the launch of service", the railways ministry said in a statement released late Thursday.

It gave no reason for the change.

Passengers can book tickets from Friday on www.12306.cn, a website run by the ministry, or at railway stations and agencies across the country, the statement said.

To fly between Beijing and Shanghai takes about two hours but travel to the airports is time-consuming, and the busy air route is often subject to delays and cancellations, making train travel an attractive option.

Work on the high-speed $33 billion railway started in April 2008.

One-way ticket prices will range between 410 yuan and 1,750 yuan subject to further adjustments, vice rail minister Hu Yadong said last week, compared with about 1,300 yuan for a flight.

The railway ministry has said the trains would run between 250 and 300 kilometres (155-188 miles) per hour on the Beijing-Shanghai link, although the line is designed for a maximum speed of 380 kph.

The speed is in line with a nationwide directive made public in April that said all high-speed trains must run at a slower pace than previously announced -- no faster than 300 kph -- to make journeys safer.

Former railways minister Liu Zhijun was sacked in February after he allegedly took more than 800 million yuan in kickbacks on contracts linked to the high-speed rail network, raising concerns about the safety of the lines.

Top 10 Reasons to Drink Aloe Vera Gel

Aloe vera gel

1-Dental Health and Hygiene---Aloe Vera helps your mouth and gums.

2-Provides Rapid Soothing--Aloe Vera enhances fibroblast function. Fibroblasts are those remarkable little cells responsible for collagen formation. They also assist in the soothing of minor burns, cuts, scrapes, sunburn, and skin irritations.

3-Aids in Healthy Digestion --A healthy digestive tract ensures that nutrients from the foods we eat are absorbed into the blood stream. Aloe Vera Juice has natural, detoxifying abilities. Drinking Aloe Vera Gel daily may improve bowel regularity and increase protein absorption, while at the same time decrease unfriendly bacteria and yeast. Aloe Vera has also demonstrated its ability to assist in soothing heartburn and other types of digestive upset.

4-Immune Support and Function --Aloe Vera provides natural support for the im-ergy Levels--Aloe Vera Gel naturally allows the body to cleanse the digestive system. Our diets include many unwanted substances which can cause lethargy and exhaustion. Taken regularly, Aloe Vera Gel ensures a greater feeling of well-being, allowing energy levels to increase while helping to maintain a healthy body weight.

6-Collagen and Elastin Repair --Aloe Vera can add a rich supply of building materials to produce and maintain healthy skin. The skin replenishes itself every 21 to 28 days. Using the nutritional building blocks of aloe vera, the skin can utilize these nutrients daily to help combat the effects of aging.

7-Daily Dose of Minerals--Some of the minerals found in aloe vera include calcium, sodium, iron, potassium, chromium, magnesium, manganese, copper, and zinc. We all know that adding foods to our diets with naturally occurmins A, B1, B2, B6, B12, C and E, Folic Acid and Niacin. The human body simply cannot store some of these vitamins; therefore we need to supplement them regularly through our diets.

9-Anti-inflammatory Properties--Aloe Vera Gel has 12 natural substances that have been shown to inhibit inflammation without side effects. Aloe may also support proper joint and muscle mobility.

10-Body-Building Blocks--Amino acids are our body's building blocks. Eight which are essential and cannot be made by the body are found within the aloe plant! Drinking Aloe Vera Juice on a regular basis allows you to help maintain your health by replenishing your body naturally with these essential amino acids. An analysis of the aloe vera plant shows that it comes closer than any other known plant to the duplication of essential amino acids.

Alzheimer's may cause global cash crunch: experts

WASHINGTON (AFP) -- Alzheimer's disease could cause a global cash crunch in coming generations -- as people begin to regularly live to 100 -- and must be considered a serious fiscal danger, experts said Thursday.

Already 24-37 million people worldwide live with the incurable form of dementia, and that number is projected to reach 115 million by 2050, a panel of Alzheimer's disease experts told the US House Committee on Foreign Affairs.

As women bear fewer children and the population ages, the world will become increasingly ill-prepared to cope with large numbers of dependent elderly people and must begin investing more in research to prevent the disease, they said.

According to the London-based Alzheimer's Disease International, the total estimated worldwide cost of the disease in 2010 was 604 billion dollars, or nearly one percent of global GDP.

Europe's E. Coli Death Toll Increases to 44

BERLIN, Germany - in a latest report another death was reported in Europe's E. coli outbreak — bringing the total to 44.

The national disease control center said Friday that 43 deaths have now been reported in Germany, the outbreak's epicenter. One person has died in Sweden.

Although the death toll is still rising, the number of new infections has declined significantly over the past two weeks.

The Robert Koch Institute, the disease control center, says 3,717 people have been reported sick in Germany, including 827 suffering from a complication that can lead to kidney failure. Another 114 cases have been reported in other countries.

The source of the bacteria has been traced to a sprout farm in northern Germany. Officials still don't know how the sprouts were contaminated.

— Slight changes in eating habits, such as eating an extra serving of potato chips or fries each day, can add plenty to a person's weight over the years, US researchers said on Wednesday. Three studies that spanned 20 years and more than 120,000 people showed that the notion of eating less and exercising more for good health may be too simplistic. However, overall food choice -- picking fruits and whole grains instead of starches and meats -- appears to have the strongest link to how much a person gains, or doesn't, in the long term, said the research led by the Harvard School of Public Health.

SETAR with still another new innovative service

SEROE BLANCO -- SETAR has recently announced that all her prepaid cellular clients can begin using the USSD code *123# to view their account balance, buy prepaid Blackberry bundles or an SMS bundle.

All postpaid customers are familiar with the SMS 225 BAL for viewing their account balance. Prepaid customers use the *138# to see their balance and the *136# to recharge. Prepaid customers need no longer be concerned about remembering different codes when they want to make use of the service. With the USSD code *123# the client can view his balance, buy prepaid Blackberry bundles and SMS bundles.

Today, many people carry a Blackberry Smartphone and use their phone data to communicate with friends and family. "PING" is something very much appreciated in our community so that practically everyone is making use of it. SETAR offers different packages, among others, BSS (Blackberry Social Service), BMS (Blackberry Messaging Service). Now with the use of the USSD code *123# customers can purchase a much simpler and faster package. This also applies to those who purchase the SMS Bundle.

Postpaid and Postpaid Hybrid customers may make use of the USSD code *123# to view their account balance both locally and abroad. This service will eventually be amplified so that all users: Postpaid, Prepaid and Postpaid Hybrid can have more options for other SETAR services.

Here's an example of how to activate the service:

Step 1: activate a service marking *123# SND

Step 2: choose an option (2) to activate a BB service

Step 3: choose a BB service you desire to have

Step 4: choose a BB package you desire to have

If the activation was successful, you will receive a message confirming that the package is being processed and that you will receive an SMS to confirm your purchase.

Copa America 2011 outfitted with 55 KIAs from KIA Motors

KIA Motors recently held a ceremony to present their fleet of 55 vehicles to be used for the transportation of footballers, delegates and dignitaries and VIP visitors of the Copa America 2011 games in Argentina.

KIA Motors is pleased to be able to play such a key role in the important Copa America 2011 games in Argentina, according to Jang-Won Sohn, President of KIA Motors for Latin and Central America. Jang-Won-Sohn indicated that... "Our participation in the football market is an integral part of our vision to become a pivotal player on the automotive stage worldwide. This action is a strategic move to maintain our identity of a young and dynamic company moving up to the next level."

KIA is the Official Automotive Sponsor of the 2011 Copa America games and presented 55 official vehicles during the line up of her ample line of models. The cars were presented to the local 2011 Copa America organizing committee. The 55 cars included the new KIA Sorento, KIA Soul Crossover, and the dynamic and compact KIA Cerato. Also among them were the more spacious KIA Carens MPV and the Carnival MPV.

KIA Motors Corporation signed strategic agreements with UEFA and with FIFA which covers international competitions that are organized by these associations such as the EURO 2012 and 2016. The 2014 FIFA World Cup is also included in the AGREE-MENTS.

Topcar N.V. is the local exclusive representative for the world renowned KIA Motors in Aruba. Topcar N.V. has an impressive history of service to her clients here in Aruba. For information on parts, service or vehicles, call 582-1547 or 582-3747.

Oprah Winfrey receives honorary doctorate

US talk show host Oprah Winfrey smiles as she receives her Honorary Doctorate in the faculty of Education from the University of Bloemfontein. Winfrey received the degree from a South African university that has been called a model of reconciliation for its response to a racist student video that shocked the nation.

Winfrey is a frequent visitor to South Africa, where she opened a school in 2007 dedicated to giving bright young women of all races opportunities in a society where they are handicapped by conservative traditions as well as the poor schools that are a legacy of apartheid.

Solidarity among fishermen Registered fishing boats are allowed to go out from all districts of Aruba

This Sunday, June 26, Hadicurari once again will host its Fishermen Day Tournament. This year for the first time, on petition of the fishermen and to demonstrate solidarity among themselves and Hadicurari Center, all participants who already registered, are allowed to go out to sea where their fishing boat is regularly moored. This is to help them save time and fuel, while still giving them the opportunity to be part of the celebration.

Participants are eligible to win more than AWG 3,000 in prizes. Registration fee is AWG 100 and each fisherman will receive 4 sleeves with the security colors and sun protection products; when arriving at the pier tomorrow they will receive a care package with sandwiches and a six pack.

Seafood Festival at Hadicurari Center

The Hadicurari Center also announces it has organized a tremendous Seafood Festival in celebration of Fisherman's Day. There will be tents with all kinds of seafood, local dishes and sweets. Naturally, a well stocked bar with refreshments for young and old will be on site.

On the menu: Keri Keri of Stingray, stewed mixed seafood, stewed chicken, stewed pork, salted cod fish – all with Pan Bati, funchi, salad and fried plantain. Also fried fish, fish balls, croquette of salted cod, fish pastechi and johnny cake with salt fish. Other local dishes offered for non-seafood lovers: stewed liver, stewed goat, stewed local cucumber, and stewed papaya. Soups on the menu are: fish soup, meat soup, seafood soup and "awa di playa."

The venue is Berea di Piscado at Palm Beach, between the Holiday Inn and the Marriott Surf Club and begins at 11:00 a.m.

All are welcome to try all these delicacies at bargain prices while enjoying a wonderful day of family fun.

Greek PM eyes new 110-billion-euro bailout

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AFP) — Greek Prime Minister George Papandreou said Friday he is negotiating a new bailout worth some 110 billion euros ($155 billion), as Europe enters a crucial 10-day period in the euro crisis.

Greece is at the centre of a storm threatening financial markets, the unity of Europe's 17-nation currency area, and even the EU -- with the United States warning of a potential to drag down world economic recovery.

While he said it was "too early to give a precise amount," the final sum would be "similar to the first aid package" in May 2010, although that was not enough to prevent the government in Athens slipping ever deeper into the red.

The actual size, Papandreou admitted, "depends on the participation of the private creditors," those banks, pension funds and insurers that the EU wants to contribute to a rescue by way of an "informal and voluntary" rollover of Greek government bonds.

Athens needs to receive by mid-July a 12-billion-euro tranche of eurozone and IMF loans from last year's bailout to avert a default.

But in order to unlock the funds Greece needs to impose more unpopular austerity measures on an increasing restive public.

A parliamentary vote is due on June 28, with opposition rife to planned privatisations of state holdings, and will be taken amid a general strike.

The second bailout has been prompted by the IMF, which before it releases its part of the aid wants to see that Athens has sufficient assistance lined up for the next couple of years.

Even before the new bailout, Greece owes the equivalent of a year-and-a-half of total national economic output, some 350 billion euros.

On Friday, the euro slid against the dollar amid persistent concerns the Greek debt crisis was spreading contagion across the eurozone.

If Papandreou steers his legislation through next week's voting, 28 billion euros of additional austerity measures will be imposed over five years, alongside a sale of Greek state holdings which international partners hope can raise up to 50 billion euros.

US economy struggles to regain momentum

WASHINGTON (AFP) — The US economy, which limped ahead at a 1.9 percent growth pace in the first quarter, is still struggling to regain momentum two years after emerging from a deep recession, economic data suggested Friday.

The Commerce Department revised up its estimate for overall economic growth by a tenth of a point in its final revision of gross domestic product.

The report was slightly better than expected, but nonetheless confirms a sharp deceleration of the world's largest economy from a 3.1 percent pace in the fourth quarter of 2010.

But Jeffrey Greenberg at Nomura Global Economics said he sees some signs of better growth in the second half of the year.

The GDP report reflected a downward revision to imports and an upward revision to inventory investment, which were offset by downward revisions to exports, to housing and state and local government spending.

The report "does not change the picture of slow economic growth in the first quarter with consumers hampered by a surge in inflation," analysts at RDQ Economics said.

Looking ahead, a major question is whether growth will be strong enough to make a major change in the unemployment rate, which was 9.1 percent in May.

Oil prices mixed as traders ponder IEA impact

NEW YORK (AFP) — Oil prices rebounded slightly in New York on Friday but dropped sharply in London as markets digested the impact of the International Energy Agency's decision to tap emergency reserves.

New York's main contract, West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August, gained 14 cents to close at $91.16 a barrel, a small rebound after the IEA's shock announcement caused it to plunge more than four dollars on Thursday.

WTI has now fallen eight percent in the past two weeks and around 20 percent since its year-to-date peak in early May.

In London, Brent North Sea crude for August delivery dropped $2.13 to close at $105.12 a barrel on the IntercontinentalExchange, after plummeting nearly seven dollars on Thursday.

The IEA, a 28-member group of oil-importing countries, provoked a massive sell-off on Thursday when it announced its decision to release 60 million barrels of crude from strategic oil stocks over the next month.

The Paris-based group said it was authorizing the draw-down -- only the third time in history it has taken such a step -- to make up for lost Libyan supplies and to give the global economy relief from sky-high energy costs.

Apple files fresh lawsuit against Samsung

SEOUL, S. Korea (AFP) — US technology giant Apple said Friday it has filed a lawsuit in South Korea claiming Samsung Electronics copied its products, in the latest round of an international legal battle between the pair.

Apple Korea said in a statement it was "no coincidence that Samsung's latest products look a lot like the iPhone and iPad, from the shape of the hardware to the user interface and even the packaging."

The South Korean firm said Apple's latest legal action wouldn't affect its own lawsuit.

Samsung and Apple are entangled in widening legal battles.

Apple in April filed suit against Samsung in San Francisco claiming the Korean firm copied its smartphones and tablet computers.

Samsung responded later that month with a lawsuit in Seoul alleging five patent infringements by Apple.

Samsung's best-selling Galaxy Tab

Samsung's Galaxy Tab has been a best-selling rival to the iPad, which has dominated the growing market for the touch-screen devices.

Despite their prickly competition in finished products, the two firms have a close business relationship.

Apple was Samsung's second-largest client in 2010 after Japan's Sony Corp, accounting for four percent of the South Korean firm's 155 trillion won ($142 billion) annual revenue.

Buster's Garage in South Beach Center for snacking, sports events and fun!

Buster's Garage, a New York City landmark, made its way to Aruba about a year ago, and found a new home at the South Beach Center across from the Radisson Resort. Dedicated to the sports fanatic, the spacious but homey interior is the perfect place to keep up with your favorite team and have a great meal.

Fun for all the family, Buster's has typical sport bar fare such as chicken wings, quesadillas, calamari rings for munching while watching the main event on 24 giant plasma screens. Every seat is good seat for catching all the action. Open from noon for lunch or dinner, it has plenty of distractions for the younger crowd, including foosball, and a video arcade, so Mom and Dad can relax and enjoy their meal.

The moderately priced menu includes all your favorite finger foods and a great selection of local and imported beers. Customer reviews gave Buster's Garage 4.5 stars out of 5 on yellowpages-aruba.com; one declared "my wife and I happened to stumble upon it -but what a find!" Another stated "Owner Rusty is so down to earth. The food was very good and the prices were outstanding for the High-Rise area. Aruba needed a place like this."

Buster's regularly organizes special events with live music. At 10 p.m. it turns into a cozy adult hangout; 18 years and over only allowed, with a DJ on duty nightly and boasting the only beerpong table on Aruba. Aside from a great place to root for the home team or your favorites during play-offs and championships, they regularly carry all UFC fights & WWE events.

Buster's is a great place where island visitors and residents mix and mingle; Monday to Thursday they close at 2:00 a.m., weekends at 4:00 a.m.

The Queen's offers an authentic taste of Aruba!

Varela, Luisa and the next generation of chef

Grandma's stoba with classic rice and beans and homemade potato beet salad

One of the distinctions of Aruban cuisine is incorporating unique indigenous ingredients such as in Wild Cucumber Stew and a particular light fish chowder accompanied by the local specialties pan bati (corn meal pancake) and funchi (the local version of polenta.) Thus, eating out at the authentically Aruban restaurant, The Queen's, is very affordable, with a true taste of regional cuisine.

Owner Varela Innocencia confesses she opened her restaurant in Oranjestad because "I grew up with this, and loved serving people our island food. My father and mother operated the little restaurant across from the Americana, which some may remember, the original Arawak. I remember how much our customers loved trying the local food, and they especially loved the prices!"

Varela's mom, Luisa, is still in the kitchen, conjuring up the delicious dishes that have been in her family for generations, which is acknowledged on the menu with "Carni Stoba di Mamachi"- "Grandma's Beef Stew," and their Arawak Steak.

We also bumped into island visitors Jim and Callie from Michigan, who were eager to try island food, and were more than pleased with their venture into local cuisine. "We will definitely return to The Queen's," they affirmed, "the food was delicious and the prices are more than right."

The menu sports a variety of steaks and tenderloin, fresh caught seafood, Caribbean lobster, and of course, one of our favorites, and what we consider a true test of local cuisine, "Keshi Yena"- "Filled Cheese." This is a tasty, filling stew of chicken, with other ingredients that are handy that day, all incased in a thick skin of melted Gouda. It was very satisfying and particularly memorable paired with The Queen's garlic bread and very special Pica, a mix of chopped onions and the famous local hot pepper, Madame Janette. Not overly spicy, it lent that perfect bit of tang to this deliciously picturesque meal.

Located next to the Harbor at the end of the Weststraat, The Queen's is open from 11:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m., daily, offering indoor and outdoor dining. They also have daily specials, aside from an extensive menu; made from whatever is in season.

We noticed a steady stream of islanders coming for lunch in the pleasant surroundings or picking up take-out containers; always a sure sign of a winner is where the locals like to eat!

U2 face protest at Glastonbury gig

GLASTONBURY, England (AFP) – Veteran rockers U2 will face a protest during their long-awaited Glastonbury gig this week-end from campaigners angry at alleged tax dodging by the group.

Direct action group Art Uncut is planning to unfurl a giant inflatable before the cameras as anti-poverty lobbyist Bono and his band take to the Pyramid Stage.

Art Uncut member Anna Walker, 32, said: "Everyone

there will see it.

Placards will also be held up declaring "Bono tax dodger" and "Bono pay up".

Fellow campaigner Charlie Dewar said: "U2's multi-million-euro tax dodge is depriving the Irish people at a time when they desperately need income to offset the Irish government's savage austerity programme."

According to The Times, the four members of U2 are the world's highest earning musicians, with a combined fortune of £455 million.

Their 360 tour, which has played to 3 million people in more than a dozen cities and is estimated to have cost $100 million (£62m), became the highest grossing tour ever in April by taking more than $558 million. U2's back catalogue, merchandise and airplay earn them more than £6 million a year.

Dewar said: "Bono is well known for his anti-poverty campaigning but Art Uncut is accusing him of hypocrisy."

This year's event sees Coldplay and Beyonce also headline.

Beyonce, who fell in love with the Somerset festival after watching husband Jay-Z perform three years ago, is believed to have cleared her diary to party at Glastonbury over three days.

There has also been speculation about footballer Wayne Rooney attending with his wife Coleen.

Aussie red-carded for piercing 'cock-up'

MELBOURNE, Australia (AFP) – An amateur Australian footballer was red-carded and marched off the field after refusing to remove a private piercing that only came to light after he was hit in the groin.

The 28-year-old captain of Melbourne's Old Hill Wanderers team was sent off after collapsing to the ground, and staying there, when he was hit in the crotch by the ball last week, the Herald Sun reported.

"He got hit in the privates and I guess he was just checking to see everything was still OK down there," an opposition player told the newspaper.

"But then the ump's spotted it."

Ordering him to remove the genital piercing, the referee was captured on a mobile phone video telling the player not to "make it any worse or I will stop the game".

In footage posted on YouTube and viewed more than 234,380 times, the referee is seen marching the player into the changing rooms and emerging seconds later brandishing a red card.

The player was suspended for at least a week.

The club issued a statement clarifying that "at no point during the incident did the player of Old Hill Wanderers expose himself to the referee or to other players on the field."

The statement was published alongside a cheeky match report on the club's website titled "Old Hill Reserves Triumph despite Cock-Up" which said the captain had been sent off for "a dangerous tackle".

Murray into Wimbledon last 16

British player Andy Murray celebrates a point

LONDON, England (AFP) - British fourth seed Andy Murray reached the last 16 at Wimbledon on Friday with a nervy 6-4, 4-6, 6-1, 7-6 (7/4) win over Croatia's Ivan Ljubicic under the Centre Court roof.

World number four Murray will face French 17th seed Richard Gasquet on Monday for a place in the quarter-finals.

The 24-year-old Scotsman, looking to become the first British men's champion since Fred Perry in 1936, overcame second set and fourth sets wobbles against the tournament's oldest player to secure his place in the second week.

Ljubicic, playing on Centre Court for the first time, had been a break ahead in the first set to lead 4-3 before Murray took the next three games to secure the opener.

The Croatian, bidding to reach the last 16 for the first time, was comfortably on top in the second before Murray enjoyed a double break in a one-sided third set.

Murray broke to lead 3-2 in the fourth set and his confidence was so high at this stage that he even won a point with a cheeky between the legs shot at the net in the seventh game.

But Ljubicic rallied from 2-4 down to lead 6-5 before Murray played the smoother tie-breaker.

Monday's clash with Gasquet will be an intriguing affair.

Gasquet was two sets to love ahead of Murray in their fourth round meeting at Wimbledon in 2008 before the Scot rallied to win.

The flamboyant French shot-maker also took a two sets to love lead when they met again at the French Open in 2010 and, once again, Murray hit back to take the next three and victory.

Roddick fears he may never win Wimbledon title

LONDON, England (AFP) - Andy Roddick fears he may never win Wimbledon after the three-time finalist suffered a shock third round exit against Feliciano Lopez on Friday.

Roddick has always believed the faster grass courts of Wimbledon made the tournament his best bet to win another Grand Slam.

Andy Roddick

But the former US Open champion looks increasingly unlikely to fulfil his dream after yet another early exit from the All England Club.

Although Roddick made the final in 2009 -- losing in five sets to Roger Federer -- the American has now failed to get past the fourth round in three of the last four years.

With age no longer on the 28-year-old's side, he concedes it has occurred to him that he may never get to lift the championship trophy.

"Well, sure. You're human. I mean, of course it does. You may never get your favourite job either," Roddick said.

"I haven't played well this year for sure. I don't think I've played my best since probably April of last year.

Although Roddick was hugely disappointed not to make the second week of his favourite Grand Slam, he insisted he wasn't as devastated as when he lost in the second round against Janko Tipssaveric in 2008 and Lu Yen-Hsun in the fourth round last year.

Roddick had won all seven of his previous seven meetings with Lopez, but the last of those encounters on grass at Queen's earlier this month suggested the eighth seed wouldn't have it all his own way on Centre Court.

It had taken Roddick three tough sets to see off Lopez at the Wimbledon warm-up event and this time the Spaniard was finally able to break his losing run.

Lopez, twice a Wimbledon quarter-finalist, served brilliantly and stopped Roddick establishing his power-game as the world number 44 secured a tie against Gael Monfils or Lukasz Kubot in the last 16.

Peng carries Chinese flag forward at Wimbledon

Chinese player Peng Shuai plays against Britain's Elena Baltacha

LONDON, England (AFP) - Peng Shuai saw off a gutsy performance from Britain's Elena Baltacha on Friday to become the only Chinese player to reach the third round at Wimbledon.

The 20th seed recovered from losing the first set to claim a 4-6, 6-2, 7-5 victory set up a clash Saturday with Melinda Czink, the Hungarian who knocked out Australian 10th seed Samantha Stosur in round one.

Peng was the only remaining Chinese in the singles after French Open winner Li Na was beaten by Germany's Sabine Lisicki and Zheng Jie went out to Japanese qualifier Misaki Doi on Thursday.

Chinese number two Peng is on a career-high world ranking of 20 but was pushed hard by the British number one on Court 18, an 800-seater show court packed with supporters cheering for the home favourite.

"Due to the rain we were waiting for two days to play and it's a long time. You cannot go and practice so I didn't feel that much confidence on the court," Peng told AFP.

Baltacha, the world number 68, had plenty of determination but her 29 unforced errors to Peng's six were bound to catch up with her.

The final set was a roller-coaster affair, with two breaks each before Peng finally broke through.

Baltacha was able to see off match point three times but could not stop Peng at the fourth time of asking.

Peng, 25, missed last year's Wimbledon due to illness, so has no ranking points to defend at the All England Club.

In reaching the third round, the Tian Jin double-hander has matched her best-ever Wimbledon effort, having made the round of 32 in 2006 and 2008.

USA coach backs her side, despite defeat

Pia Sundhage

DRESDEN (AFP) - Pia Sundhage, coach of two-time former world champions the USA, insisted Thursday her side remain one of the favourites to lift the women's World Cup despite a recent defeat to Norway.

The three week-long women's World Cup starts on Sunday and the USA begin their campaign in Group C when they take on North Korea in Dresden on Tuesday.

The USA team arrived here Thursday, having travelled up from their training base in Austria, but despite Monday's shock 3-1 defeat to Norway in a pre-tournament friendly, Sundhage says her side can still win the trophy.

"We are one of the favourites because we are a good team," Sundhage said.

"We are looking forward to a fantastic tournament. The girls have lots of energy and are extremely confident."

Despite having won the World Cup on home soil in 1999 and in China in 1991, the USA struggled to qualify for the 2011 tournament and needed a play-off win over Italy to go through.

"We have had a bumpy road, but I think the situation has strengthened us," said Sundhage.

In Group C, the USA will also face Colombia on July 2 in Sinsheim and Sweden on July 6 in Wolfsburg.

The Americans lost a semi-final to Mexico in World Cup qualifying and needed a two-leg playoff victory over Italy simply to book the last berth in Germany.

"It did test us but that's what this team always does. We fight," US forward Abby Wambach said. "We're resilient women and we're not willing to go down without a fight."

The American lineup includes 14 players who were part of the US 2008 Beijing Olympic gold medal squad. Each American player is from the six-team US league Women's Professional Soccer.

US captain Christie Rampone takes the field for her fourth World Cup and the 35-year-old defender is the only remaining player from the 1999 US championship squad.

"We have a good mix of experienced players as well as young players that bring great energy," Rampone said. "Everyone has that passion for the game. We went through some rough times with this team so I think that's going to help."

Wambach, with a team-best 118 career goals, and midfielder Shannon Boxx are each in their third World Cup.

"I would feel very unhappy and unsatisfied with a career without a World Cup championship so I will be doing whatever I can to make sure that we're standing at the top podium at the end of this tournament," Wambach said.

"It's not going to be easy. It will be the most difficult world championship to win, World Cup or Olympics. I'm excited to get started."

'Jets' selected as Winnipeg's nickname

ST. PAUL (AFP) - Owners of the newly relocated Winnipeg franchise in the National Hockey League have reportedly chosen to call the team 'Jets', after the city's former NHL club.

The Winnipeg Free Press, TSN and ESPN were among those reporting that True North Sports and Entertainment, which purchased the Atlanta Thrashers, have decided on 'Jets' in part because it was the area's popular choice.

The original Jets relocated to Phoenix in 1996 and changed their nickname to Coyotes.

Clemens granted access to doping report notes

WASHINGTON (AFP) - A federal judge has ordered embattled Major League Baseball legend Roger Clemens to be given access to notes taken by attorneys who wrote the Mitchell Report on doping in the American sport.

US District Judge Reggie Walton on Friday said that Clemens needs some of the notes taken in their interviews to adequately prepare his defense on charges of lying before a congressional committee in a 2008 hearing.

Clemens, who was indicted last August, faces up to 21 months in prison if convicted on all charges, including one count of obstruction of Congress, two counts of perjury and three counts of making false statements.

The trial is set to start on July 6.

Clemens was accused in the report of taking performance-enhancing drugs, claims he went before US lawmakers to deny in a 2008 hearing, where his testimony and that of his former trainer, Brian McNamee, conflicted.

McNamee said he injected Clemens with performance-enhancing drugs in 1998, 2000 and 2001.

Clemens, a seven-time Cy Young Award winner as top pitcher, saw former New York Yankees team-mate Andy Pettitte testify that Clemens told him he had taken performance-boosting drugs.

Clemens claimed Pettitte misremembered their conversations.

This year a total of 6 athletes from Aruba will travel to Suriname to participate at the 37th Annual Staatsolie Swim marathon (Sunday, July 3rd 2011). The Staatsolie Swim marathon is an 18k open water long distance competition which runs from Domburg towards the capital, Paramaribo in the Suriname River. Both national as international competitors including the ones that see this extreme physical endurance competition as a challenge will participate. An average of a 100 swimmers participate at this annual competition.

The Aruban team of Dr. Johnny Cheng, Jan Roodzant, Giovanni Kelly, Rembert Ras, Giovanni Croes en Ossy Tromp, has been preparing vigorously for this event.

The competition on the Suriname River is a beautiful and nice route: one will be swimming towards the capital Paramaribo alongside tropical rain forest.

There will be of course enough guidance for example: Police boats and boats of the Marine Authorities of Suriname.

The team of 6 is covering a part of the cost of this trip, but the other part was made possible thanks to some sponsors that include: Insel Air, MCB, PwC, Unicon, Tri-Bike Aruba and Gamma-research.

Participating in this swim marathon is a tough challenge and requires a considerable amount of discipline, determination and devotion. By training together, which works excellent, the Aruban swimmers are hoping to put in some great performance with positive results July 3rd in Suriname.
